Changes during the Industrial Revolution

Agriculture – New tools, fertilisers and harvesting techniques were introduced.

Industry – factories sprung up all over the country creating more efficient ways to produce goods such as wool, cotton and coal. The increase in factories brought thousands of new jobs.

Transport and communications - There had previously been no very fast way of transporting goods and people around the country. Roads, canals and railways were built.

Technology - There were also many scientific discoveries and technological inventions that changed society and industry. For example, the ideas that germs caused diseases was discovered

Factory working conditions

Long working hours: normal shifts were usually 12-14 hours a day, with extra time required during busy periods.

Low wages: a typical wage for male workers was about 15 shillings (75p) a week, but women and children were paid much less, with children three shillings (15p). For this reason, employers preferred to employ women and children.

Accidents: forcing children to crawl into dangerous, unguarded machinery led to many accidents and deaths.

Health: The air was full of dust, which led to chest and lung diseases and loud noise made by machines damaged workers' hearing.

Living conditions

Overcrowding: due to large numbers of people moving to the cities, there were not enough houses for all these people to live in.

Disease: typhus, typhoid, tuberculosis and cholera all existed in the cities of England. Diseases spread quickly.

Waste disposal: gutters were filled with litter. Human waste went into the sewers and then flowed straight into rivers.

Poor quality housing: houses were built very close together so there was little light or fresh air inside them. They did not have running water and people found it difficult to keep clean.

Lack of fresh water: people could get water from a variety of places, such as streams, wells and stand pipes, but this water was often polluted by human waste.
